

Vocational training and awareness to the police about trafficking

International Development Cooperation Department (HELLENIC - AID)

Aim

In cooperation with the INAMETE (Police studies, training and documentation Institute), the project aims at the enlightenment of police officers about all aspects of trafficking. Specialised goals are in the 24 cities seminars about the most sensitive aspects of this issue.

Rationale

Special questionnaires are filled by them and bring out the missing points and the lack of knowledge wherever it is. The seminars that follow are based on the certain knowledge officers should possess in order to follow the letter of the law and the findings of the questionnaires. Seminars are conducted by experts on trafficking and will take place in 24 cities of Greece. Valuable will be the contribution of Rumanian experience that we will have in a field they know better.

Methods and Results

Lectures will be organized according to the needs and lack of knowledge that a former questionnaire will put forward.

Activities

There is a strict schedule with activities and dates for both of the two years. The project team will conduct seminars in police departments. Specialised scientists and experts will contact with police officers and offer their specified knowledge. Booklets and audiovisual discs will be distributed to all participants that will include all information and minutes of the lectures.

Expected outcomes

- The outcome is estimated to be the better knowledge on the issue of trafficking on behalf of the policemen and application of the relative law. The policeman should be seen as the extension of a supportive state in its effort to service the people and inform about the rights of the victims.
- Provision of knowledge about the legislation regarding the victims' rights.
- Effective contribution of police that enables the victims to exercise in a better way their rights and provision to overpass the difficulties of their lives.
