

Sofia Adam studied economics in the University of Macedonia/Greece and completed her master in Development Economics at SOAS, University of London. She is currently a Phd candidate in the field of Work Integration Social Enterprises in Greece. She has an extensive work experience in projects development and management as well as research in the fields of poverty and social exclusion. She has worked in NGOs, the Faculty of Psychology of Aristotle University of Thessaloniki and as Head of Support Team to the Special Administration Unit, Prefecture of Central Macedonia. She speaks Greek, English, Spanish, Italian (basic level) and she is currently studying French.