

Maik Fielitz has studied Political Science and History at Friedrich-Schiller University of Jena (Germany). During this Bachelor study course he was attending to the Erasmus program and studied accordingly for one year at Panteion University of Social and Political Sciences in Athens.

Likewise he was working through an internship at the Greek think tank Hellenic Center for European Studies (EKEM) and finished his research activities there with a thesis about the German position on the enlargement of the European Union in the Western Balkans.

Maik was furthermore participating in the creation of the European Resistance Archive (ERA) – a European documentation platform for resistance against fascism and occupation during the Second World War.

Maik is speaking English fluently, he has a good level of Greek and an adequate level of French language. He knows basics of Russian and Spanish.